John Wanamaker's Store, Philadelphia.

These are the First Days of the Fall Business,

already the hum of activity begins. We launch the busy season with that prove to be strangely low. A few of these have been in store some days, but, to give everybody a fair chance, we held the announcements until the return of people from their holidays.

A good lot of first-rate Jerseys at $2.25. These are all black. The colors are $2.50.

A Black Dress Silk at [illegible] ns, that until recently was always $1.00.

A fine Black Rhadama, [illegible] inches wide, at $1.50.

Hair-wool Black Dress Goods at 12½ cents, which is just half-price.

All-wool stylish Plaid Suiting, 42 inches, at 50 cents. We sold the same at $1.00.

Another in stripes at 65 cents. Not dear at $1.00.

A quality of Lupin's Cashmere for 50 cents (all wool). The new tariff will prevent this quality from ever again selling at this price.

A Black Albatross at 25 cents, exactly half-price.

A fine Black Camel's Hair, 46 inches wide, at 60 cents.

A good 36-inch all-wool Cashmere at 40 cents.

An excellent Black Cashmere, all-wool, a yard wide, at 45c.

A very few much admired Embroidered Robes at one-third off of usual price.

A Bleached Muslin, full yard wide, for 10c. The best we ever had at that price.

The best Twilled, All-Wool Red Flannel we ever sold for 25c.

The best Canton Flannel for 12½c. We never could get so good a quality at the price before.

An extraordinary lot of Towels at 25c.

Eight lots of Ladies' and Children's Hose that are on our counters at 25 per cent. under prices.

These lots of Shoes that are amazingly desirable for the prices:

250 pairs Women's Straight Goat Button, $4.35.

172 pairs Women's Straight Goat Button, $3.25.

215 pairs Women's Curacoa Kid Button, $4.25.

186 pairs Women's French Kid Button, $5.00.

152 pairs Women's Kid Slippers, $1.25.

112 pairs Women's Kid Ties, $2.00.

110 pairs Women's French Kid Oxford Ties, $3.25.

141 pairs Women's Front Lace Walking Boots, $3.25.

131 pairs Women's Front Lace Walking Boots, $4.50.

150 pairs Women's French Kid Button Boots, $5.25.

China and Glassware we hardly dare to risk saying anything about, as the lots announced are nearly always sold out in a few hours of the day they are presented. Watch the city daily papers for the announcements, and if these lots are sold when you come do not be disappointed, as we have new lots in every day or two.

In Furniture. Young couples should see

The new Ash Suite of Bed Room Furniture for $25.
The same goods in Cherry for $28.

Our Works at present turn us out only four suites per day of these goods, so that first come, first served. Nothing like this has ever been done in Philadelphia before.

A fine frame Body Brussels Carpet at $1.25 that we are willing to endorse as a good thing.

We are not permitted to give the makers' names. The goods are new this season, and fifty patterns at least to choose from.

The first Fall Offering of Ladies' Robes are all-wool, of ample material, in nine varieties, dark, rich hues, and the new patterns are on the palm-leaf order. The effect is much the same, if not a full equivalent, as though an expensive Cashmere Shawl were dissected and made into a robe, as is often done. The expense being infinitely less—$25.

Also a few Wrapper Patterns, Persian, and with a decided Oriental effect. The olive, old gold and rich, dark hues are subdued in a broad border of consistent but curious formation, 10 to 11 yards each. $2.00 per yard.

There are other lots equally interesting, and new things daily arriving.

Samples of Dress Goods sent by mail; a "Postal" will receive immediate attention.

SEEK

health and avoid sickness. Instead of feeling tired and worn out, instead of aches and pains, wouldn't you rather feel fresh and strong?

You can continue feeling miserable and good for nothing, and no one but yourself can find fault, but if you are tired of that kind of life, you can change it if you choose.

How? By getting one bottle of BROWN' IRON BITTERS, and taking it regularly according to directions.

Mansfield, Ohio, Nov. 26, 1881.
Gentlemen:—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast, with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, and loss of appetite. I have taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters; I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pain in side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the king of medicines.
JOHN K. ALLENDER.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is composed of Iron in soluble form; Cinchona the great tonic, together with other standard remedies, making a remarkable non-alcoholic tonic, which will cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Malaria, Weakness, and relieve all Lung and Kidney diseases.

THINK OF IT NOW!

Although much is said about the importance of a blood-purifying medicine, it may be possible that the subject has never seriously claimed your attention. Think of it now!

Almost every person has some form of scrofulous poison latent in his veins. When this develops in Scrofulous Sores, Ulcers, or Eruptions, or in the form of Rheumatism, or Organic Diseases, the suffering that ensues is terrible. Hence the gratitude of those who discover, as thousands yearly do, that will thoroughly eradicate this evil from the system.

As well expect life without air as health without pure blood. Cleanse the blood with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

SELECT STORY.

THE DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION.

BY G. MAGILVEE PENN.

"You ought to get married, Layton, and the sooner the better. A young vicar who is a bachelor is almost as awkwardly placed as a young doctor. Marriage, sir, marriage, that's your plan."

"Very good advice, doctor, I have no doubt," answered John Layton, Vicar of Stoke Minim, in the Lincoln Marshes, "but then you know the old saying, "Marry in haste, repent at leisure."

"Then don't marry in haste," returned the doctor, beating his boot with his riding whip as he sat sideways upon his cob. "Take your time over it. What made you come here to lodge?"

"They told me that Mrs. Dredge was such a clean woman," said the young vicar, looking back into the garden rather dolefully, as he stood just outside the gate, talking to the doctor, who was going his round.

And certainly the prospect was not pleasant, for Mrs. Dredge was a very industrious widow by the way, was having what she called "a good clean;" and as it was a fine day, the whole of the parlor furniture had been removed out into the garden, where chairs were piled up as if engaged in acrobatic tricks, the table was straddling over the flower bed, the carpet lay on the tiny grass-plot, the shred hearth-rug hung over the fence, and there came from within a lively sound of scrubbing and the washing of water in a pail.

"Why, what are you doing now this is going on?"

"Oh, I am obliged to make shift in the bedroom till it is done," remarked the vicar dolefully.

"Ah! I shall have to find you a wife."

"Better find me a new vicarage."

"Ah! don't see much chance of that," said the doctor. "We are too poor over here. Why don't you come and have a walk? Freshen you up."

"Well, I think I will," said the vicar. "Wait till I get my hat."

He ran in for his soft felt and came back to find the doctor dismounted, and tying his cob's reins in a knot, so that they could not trail.

"Tck, Jacob!" he cried, as the vicar joined him, and the cob went steadily on in front, while its master walked with the youg clergyman behind.

"Ah!" said the doctor, "I must get you a wife. Let me see."

"Don't you think my income ought to preclude all matrimonial ideas?" said John Layton, smiling.

"Pooh! nonsense! what's enough for one is enough for two," cried the doctor. "Come, sir, none of your celibate ideas. How am I to live if people don't marry, and have children to be vaccinated and have the measles and scarlatina and rashes and all that sort of thing? Look here, marry a woman with money. What do you say to Miss Johnson, at Copley Farm? She has been to church regularly ever since you came. There's a strapper. Dark hair, dark eyes, good points—but she's so plump you can't talk of points. Warranted sound."

"Are you talking of a lady or a horse, doctor?"

"Lady, sir, lady. Then, there's Miss Wardman; slim, genteel, hundred a year in the three per cents. Her nose is rather red, certainly, but matrimony may take that away. What are you shaking your head about? She isn't 50."

"Won't do, doctor, won't do."

"Oh, bless us and save us!" said the hearty little doctor, with mock surprise. "He,s particular and dainty, is he? Well, what do you say to Dolly Betts, the shop-keeper's daughter? 20, nice pink and white, good teeth, vaccinated her myself, had measles, croup, scarlet fever, chicken-pox and thrush. Regularly salted, you see, and the old man will leave her a round sum when he can't stick to it any longer."

"Try again," said the vicar, laughing, while they trudged sturdily on, with Jacob stopping every now and then to browse and being left a few hundred yards behind; but the doctor took no heed, and at the end of a few minutes Jacob came trotting after them, went on in front, and kept there till he saw something else toothsome.

"Try again, eh? Why you are particular! What do you say to Lady Laura Peignton, at the Towers?"

"No, thank you."

"Well then, Sir John Taunton's daughter Bridget? Ah! there's a girl for you, see her follow hounds! Why she leads the field, sir, and stops at nothing."

"Ah, now you are talking sense, doctor," said John Layton mockingly; "that's just the woman to share a poor clergyman's house, and see his sick. She'll darn his stockings, and sew his buttons and help him to spread out his small income so that there might be enough to spare for charity. A woman who would share with him her counsel and advice when trouble came upon him, and his spirit was low, a woman who would be a helpmeet for him. Would your galloping Bridget Taunton be that?"

"No, I'll be blessed if she would, my lad. She drives me mad with her horsey slang and groom-like ways."

"Then we'll leave her out of the question," said the vicar, laughingly humoring the doctor in his prescribing fit.

"That's the sort of woman you want then, eh? one of that button sewing, stocking-darning sort?"

"Yes."

"Full of sympathy and all that kind of thing?"

"Of course."

"Saving and ministering and gentle?"

"Yes."

"Sort of nineteenth century angel in petticoats?"

"Yes."

"No objection to good looks? No Irish need apply, eh?"

"Place of birth no object, doctor," said the vicar, laughing.

"Ah, now I see what you want," said the doctor, with a droll twinkle in his eyes. "We'll soon put that right. There she is! Hi! Fan-ny!

The vicar started with astonishment as the doctor threw open the gate of what seemed to be a pretty cottage farm, and held it while "Jacob" cantered through and began to enjoy himself among the grass. But what at once took the vicar's attention was the sight of a tall young lady in a light grass-cloth dress, and soft gray hat, rising from a camp-stool with a sketching-board in her hand, the spot where she had been sitting being beneath some pollard willows at the side of a large pond, and she stood for a moment hesitating before advancing to meet them.

As she came nearer the vicar could see that she had long, loosely-arranged, fair hair, a very sweet expression of countenance, that she was graceful and ladylike, that she was apparently about two or three and twenty, and perfectly calm and self-possessed.

"How are you, my darling?" said the doctor, kissing her affectionately. "Don't sit out there in the sun. Here, I've brought you a visitor—our parson, the Rev. John Layton. I want him to talk to you, and see if he can't do you some good."

"Oh, uncle, why?" cried the girl, looking her astonishment, after returning the vicar's salute.

"Oh, I'm serious, my dear, and it's for your own good. She's just out of that wicked London, Layton—come down to stay with my sister here. I want her ways mended."

"Why, uncle, what have I been doing?" she said, laughing so merrily that, as the young vicar gazed in her sweet ingenuous face, with its brightening eyes and pleasant dimples, he wished she would laugh again.

"What have you been doing, miss? Why, getting along with that wicked artistic lot. Parson, she uses the most terrible slang, and utters bad words. My wall paper di'n't please her, and she called it a dado, and actually said my picture that I bought at Manor House sale was hot and foxy."

"Oh, hush, uncle!"

"No, miss, I won't hush. Then she says chiaroscure, a nasty foreign word, and all sorts of other things. You must lecture her, Layton, you must indeed. There, stop and have a chat with her. I told my sister I'd bring you over, and there'll be a bit of dinner in about an hour's time. I'll ride over and see mother Baker and old Tim Rodgers. Back in time."

"Then this was all planned," said the vicar quickly.

"To be sure it was my dear boy. I saw you were out of sorts, and you were grumbling last time I saw you about wanting society, so I thought I'd arrange this. There, ta-ta for the present."

"This is like a surprise, Miss Brown," said the vicar.

"My name is Anderson—Frances Anderson," said the pleasant, bright little vision that had, as it were, suddenly made its appearance in the vicar's rustic world. "I have not been very well, and uncle said I must come down for a change, so I am staying with Aunt Frances. Will you come in? Ah, here she is."

A pleasant, comely little widow body, wonderfully like the doctor refined down, came toddling slowly out of the cottage just then, and the vicar recognized her as a lady who had once been over to the church.

"I am very glad to see you, Mr. Layton," she said warmly. "I don't come over to see very often, for you see I belong to Mr. Morris' parrish, though your church is nearer. Will you come in and sit down?"

"If you will allow me," said the vicar, "I should like to stay in the open air. Everything is so beautiful at this time of the year, and perhaps Miss Anderson will go on with her drawing. I take great interest in art."

"Do you? Then I will go at once," said the girl eagerly. "When uncle comes back I will see about a little fruit."

"The vicar had felt angry at first, not liking to be made the victim of what was rather like a practical joke; but before he had been ten minutes in Fanny Anderson's company all that was forgotten, and he was delighted with sweetness and the utter absence of modern society young-ladyism. He was, in fact, chatting freely with a highly-cultivated girl, ardently in love with the art she practiced.

How the time passed under those shady willows neither of them knew, for the vicar had proved himself to be no mean artist, and they were in the midst of a discussion on perspective, when they were startled by the doctor's voice.

"Been two hours instead of one. Verry sorry, but Mother Baker really is ill now. Fanny, my dear, get your aunt to make up a basket of odds and ends, and go and see the poor old soul."

"Oh, yes, uncle, I will," said Fanny, and the vicar felt a suspicious twinge as to whether this was got up; but no, it was all perfectly natural, and to his great satisfaction there was nothing at the pleasant dinner that jarred. The doctor was quiet and gentlemanly, and never once approached a bantering tone; so that when the hour for parting came the vicar felt that he had passed one of the pleasantest days of his life.

A week passed—a fortnight—and the doctor did not come near, so at last the Rev. John Layton found his way across to the little farm to be warmly greeted, but still in a way that never once touched upon his susceptibilities. Mrs. Baker was not in his parish, but he heard of her ailments and how many times Fanny had been over to see the poor old lady, what she had said, and how grateful she was for a book being read to her for an hour or two, and so on.

The vicar's next visit was at the end of a week, and that day there were some sketching done.

Next day old Doctor Brown called upon the vicar and stopped chatting for an hour, but he never once mentioned Fanny Anderson's name. He, however, invited the vicar to come and spend an evening with him; and they played chess, and went down the garden, for the doctor was proud of his patch, as he called it—a very extensive garden, by the way. But, to the vicar's disappointment, no mention was made of Fanny's name.

Then came more visits to the farm; then one pleasant golden afternoon the doctor and vicar dined there, and everything seemed peaceful and sweet.

Then time ran on again till Fanny had been down for fully four months, and one soft, sunny autumn noon when, according to his now frequent custom, the vicar had walked over to the little farm, he found her by the gate with a letter in her hand, which had just been left by a man who had been over to the town.

The grass of the home close was as soft as velvet, and the vicar's footsteps were unheard, so that he was close to Fanny Anderson before she looked up, and he saw that her cheeks were wet with tears.

A sudden pang, such as he had never before felt, shot through his breast at the sight of her pained face, and he stepped forward and caught her hand in his.

"You are in trouble," he said. "You have heard bad news."

"I ought not to call it trouble," she replied, coloring slightly. "I ought not, perhaps, to call it bad news; but I have been so happy down here," she said, with a plaintive look in her eyes, as she gazed round the place with its verdant fields and changing woods. "Everything has been so calm and peaceful, and I have been so well, Mr. Layton, that I quite dread poor old smoky London with its dingy streets."

"Yes," said the vicar, in a low voice, "you are much changed since you came. Do you leave us soon?"

"My aunt with whom I live in town says she shall expect me to-morrow night, and I fear I have been very ungrateful to her in staying away so long."

"There was a minute's silence then, during which both seemed to be gazing wistfully at the willows by the little mere.

"Will you try and finish the sketch?" he said at last.

"Yes," she replied, sadly; and, going in, she returned with her folio, which he took from her mechanically and placed beneath his arm as they walked slowly and in silence toward the pool, and then round to the farther side beneath the old pollard willow trees.

He had never spoke words of love to her, serious or light. Her intercourse with him had been that of one of the sweetest and most ingenuous of her sex, but now it had come upon them suddenly that this was the last day of the sweet communion they had enjoyed, and all the future seemed to be a blank.

John Layton was very silent as they walked on gazing straight before them, till, looking round, he saw that Fanny was walking with her hands clasped together, and that her tears were falling fast.

"Don't—don't," he cried passionately, for the sight of her grief unmanned him, "I cannot bear to see you like this."

She looked up at him wistfully, and the folio fell to the ground. Not another word was spoken then, but he caught her hands in his and stood gazing almost wildly in her soft, wistful eyes. Then she snatched them away and covered her face, sobbing now aloud.

"Fanny," he said, laying his hand upon her arm, "this has come like a surprise. I ought not, perhaps, to speak, but I am carried out of my ordinary way of thinking by—by this shock. I am so poor—merely a country parson—but I love you better than I can tell."

"Oh, hush!" she said, between her sobs.

"I ought not to have spoken—I ought not to have sent you away thinking of my folly, but the words would come out. I ought to have had more self-command, but this news seemed to tell me how necessary you had become to my existence. It has been so sweet a time, and now—forgive me—it must end."

"Must end," she said softly, repeating his words.

"I have been cruel to you to speak as I have. It was my want of self-control. Fanny, God bless you! Good-bye. I cannot stay."

He had turned to go, but a faint cry arrested him, and, as he saw the blank despairing face and anguished eyes of her whom he was about to leave, his heart leaped within him, and the next moment Fanny Anderson was sobbing upon his breast.

It was a very solitary place fortunately, but they came to their senses after Fanny had softly owned that it would break her heart to have to leave that pleasant simple Eden now. Perhaps if the Adam had been transferred to town she might have altered her opinion, but he was not going to be transferred to town, and so they went on, and out among the willow trees, talking of their future, when they both started guiltily as a voice behind them said:

"Ah, here you are then, eh?"

It was the doctor, and a quiet smile, full of drollery, stole over his handsome face as he said:

"I found a letter at home from auntie saying you are to go back at once, and I went to tell Layton, but I found he had come here, and—is it all right?"

No one answered.

"You'll come back again, won't you darling?" said the doctor.

"Oh, uncle!" she cried; and the tears overflowed once more, as she flung her arms around his neck, kissed him, and then fled toward the cottage.

"Ah!" said the doctor, "I've never said a word since I brought you over that day. I thought I'd let matters take their own course I prescribed, and you took the medicine like a man. John Layton, you've won about the best and truest girl I ever knew."

"The best and truest," said the vicar, holding out his hand.

"And not the poorest, either, for I always look upon her as my child, and some day perhaps—— Well, there, John Layton, I'm very, very, very glad."

The sequel to this needs no telling.

"How many races are there?" was asked by a Kentucky school ma'am. Up sprang a shock-headed youngster, a yard-wide smile on his face, and exclaimed; "Three—the spring meeting, midsummer speeding, and fall fairs."

A Michigan wife who caught her husband making love to a younger and prettier female, didn't pitch into either of them. Waiting until she found the girl alone, she proved to her that her husband was in the habit of eating with his fingers and wiping the grease off on his hair, and this so disgusted the young woman that she went away vowing that she would never speak to the man again.

A Missing Bidegroom.

THE STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE OF A PHILADELPHIAN AT NEW HAVEN, CONN.

A large congregation assembled in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Tuesday morning October 30 in pleasant anticipation of witnessing a ceremony which was to unite in marriage Eugene Lynch, of Philadelphia, and Miss Mary Mulcahey, daughter of Jeremiah Mulcahey, of 354 West Portsea Street. The ceremony was appointed for 9 o'clock, and before that time a long line of carriages, which had brought guests to the expected ceremony, was ranged in front of the church.

The decorations were on an elborate scale. Flowers and ferns were gracefully arranged about the altar, and at the rail had been erected a beautiful floral arch under which the bridal couple were to stand during the ceremony. The hour arrived and passed and the bridal couple did not come. The assemblage was astonished, but just what had occurred no one seemed to know, and in little groups those present left the church very much disappointed.

It is nearly a year since Eugene Lynch asked Miss Mulcahey to be his wife. She accepted him and from that day to present time the young lady had been making preparations for the event that should have occurred in New Haven. To better his fortunes he went to Philadelphia and reports from him were to the effect that he was prospering. He occasionally visited his sweetheart and everything ran smoothly.

The day for the marriage was at last settled upon and the final preparations had all been completed. Lynch was to reach the home of the bride Monday morning. He did not arrive until nearly 4 o'clock. Of course. the delay caused considerably anxiety for the time, but his explanation was considered satisfactory, and nothing more was thought of the occurrence. A little later he acted in anything but his usual manner. He appeared ill at ease, was cool, distant and apparently troubled about something that he did not care to discuss. Finally he said he would go to the Register's Office and obtain the marriage license.

The minutes became hours, but the bridegroom did not return. He promised to return in a short time. His promise was broken and the enxiety was great. His conduct and speech were recalled, and then, for the first time, fears were entertained that something was wrong. A brother of Miss Mulcahey went in search of the absent one and found him at his aunts residence, Ashman Street. Lynch was in bed when Mr. Mulcahey arrived. He did not show himself but sent word to his visitor that he did not feel well, and that he would be at the house early in the morning.

Such conduct struck the brides brother as very peculiar, and, thinking something was wrong, he began an investigation. He went from Ashman Street to the residence of Register Doherty and inquired if a marriage license had been issued to one Eugene Lynch. Dr. Doherty answered in the negative and Mr. Mulcahey returned home and reported the fact. Naturally there was considerable consternation, and some uncomplimentary comments were made about Mr. Lynch. It was deemed best, however, not to prejudge, but to wait and see if he would not appear at the time agreed this morning.

The hour arrived, the sun shone brightly through the windows of the bride's modest home, but the groom was not there. Young Mr. Mulcahey once more instituted a search. He visited the aunt's house again, and there learned that Lynch had arisen at 6 o'clock, dressed himself in his best clothes and left the house, as the family supposed to go to the house of his betrothed. Mr. Mulcahey thought that possibly he had missed Lynch on the way, and another call was made on Register Doherty, who was questioned about the license. The same negative answer was given. There had been no license issued to Eugene Lynch and no one had applied for one for him.

Mr. Mulcahey at once hastened to his sister's home to impart the news. It came with crushing force upon the family. Lynch had borne an excellent reputation and seemed perfectly happy and contented, and up to the hour of his disappearance had no complaints or objections to make. His strange absence remains a mystery.

In commenting upon the foregoing facts, the Harrisburg Patriot of Nov. 2, gives some excellent advice as follows:

Miss Mulcahey was a youg woman of engaging manner and considerable means. With the latter fact Mr. Lynch was acquainted. Mr. Lynch was a young man of engaging manner but no means. With this latter fact Miss Mulcahey was not acquainted.

Her lack of information or rather her misinformation on the subject was attributable to no fault of hers. When a lover represents to his intended wife that certain things in connection with his exchequer are facts, unless there is abundant evidence at hand to prove the falsity of his statements, she is going to believe him in nineteen cases out of twenty. Mr. Lynch informed Miss Mulcahey that his financial circumstances were such as to fully warrant marrying her. As a matter of fact they were not, but the untruth he uttered was not discovered until after the hour set for the performance of the marriage ceremony. Then it was discovered that he was so impecunious as to have gone out trying to borrow money to defray the expenses incidental to a marriage and the subsequent bridal trip. He failed in this and ignominously fled.

Young men without money who are thrown much into the society of young women with it make a weak and grievous mistake when they pursue any such methods as those of this recreant lover to conceal the extent of their wordly possessions. It manifests a juvenile spirit and has time and time again and still is subjecting them to mortification and contempt. There's no necessity for parading one's impecuniosity before the eyes of the whole world; but on the other hand there is every reason for being honest about it when occasion demands some statement of its character. The girl who will reject a man's offer of marriage simply because he has still to make his fortune notwithstanding the fact that he is possessed of every faculty and desire to make it may not be such a desirable helpmeet after all. She most certainly isn't worth lying for.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1883.

TUESDAY'S ELECTION.

New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, Mississippi carried by the Democrats.

Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Connecticut go Republican.

The Republican state ticket in Pennsylvania is elected by a majority of about 17,000. Philadelphia gave a republican majority of 20,500, and Jeffries was elected controller by 1709 majority over page.

Virginia sends Mahone to the rear by the election of a democratic legislature.

Connecticut elected a republican legislature.

Ben Butler got bounced in Massachusetts, and Robinson, republican, was elected by about 15,000 majority. The defeat of Butler cannot be considered a republican victory. Many leading democrats opposed his re-election.

New York is claimed by the democrats by a majority of 20,000. Abbett, democrat, has a majority in New Jersey of 2,500.

We have no tears to shed over Ben Butler's defeat in Massachusetts. He is a demagogue of the first water, and has been a professed member of every party almost, in existence, in his efforts to hold position. We shall hear nothing more of his Presidential aspirations in 1884.

OFFICIAL VOTE OF COLUMBIA COUNTY, NOV. 6th, 1883.

Below we give the official vote of this county as compared with the vote for Governor in 1882. For District Attorney and County Surveyor there was only one candidate—the Democratic nominees

In 1882 there was 102 Independent votes cast, 232 greenback and 107 prohibitionist:

Isaac A. Dewitt 4, for County Surveyor.

The result of the election held on Tuesday last, notwithstanding the loss of Pennsylvania, is very favorable to the democratic party. New York, the pivotal state in the coming presidential contest, has given a large democratic majority in spite of the efforts to divide the party and against a most determined effort of the reunited opposition to carry the state. The whole democratic ticket is elected in that state, except Maynard who was opposed by the liquor interest. An acceptable democratic candidate for president will, without doubt, receive the electoral vote of the Empire state.

A tremendous effort was also made by the republicans to wrench Maryland from the democratic column. They spent an immense sum of money to accomplish that end and so confident were their leaders of the success of the effort that they boasted in advance of an assured triumph and on the night of the election telegraphed that they had carried the state. The returns show how terribly they were disappointed. The state gives the usual democratic majority. New Jersey, too, proves her fidelity to the democracy and trebles her last majority for governor. In the west the republicans lost heavily in Minnesota and Nebraska shows a strong inclination to fall into line with the democracy.

But the most gratifying outcome of Tuesday's election is the defeat of the corrupt and desperate political trader and trickster, William Mahone, in Virginia. For the first time in three years the Old Dominion has spoken with the old-time democratic voice. On the popular vote the democrats carry the state by 12,000 to 15,000 majority and both branches of the new legislature will be democratic with a majority on joint ballot of at least fifteen. This ends Mahone's career in the United States senate and renders him powerless to continue his corrupt barter with the republicans in that body and with the Arthur administration. This brings Virginia back into the democratic column for 1884 and winds up the republican attempt to capture electoral votes in the south by dickering and bargaining with disappointed and scheming politicians. The general result on Tuesday indicates beyond doubt the defeat of the republicans in 1884.—Patriot.

In a speech at Danville last Monday night, General Beaver in refering to S. J. Randall's criticism of the republican party for buying Alaska said that he would bring a purchaser who would give twice the amount paid for the country any time the United States was tired of it.

By all means let General Beaver bring on his purchaser. This nation never needed the annexation of Alaska; we have never received the interest of the money invested; that country is without any government or laws and the churches throughout the United States are preparing petitions to congress asking that a territorial government may be established there. Either civilize and utilize Alaska or sell it, and if General Beaver's man wants it at twelve million dollars strike it down to him at once, as no body else is likely to want it at that price.

The Democrats of Luzerne county elected their ticket by a large majority.

The report of the Commissioners of Internal Revenue shows that the total receipts from all sources of internal revenue taxation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1883, were $144,553,344, as compared with $146,523,273 for the year 1882 and $135,229,912 for the year 1881. The total cost of collection was $5,113,734. It is stated that the total expenses of the service will be found on final adjustment to be about three and a half per cent. on the amount collected.

The Dayton, (O.) Democrat says it is good a thing that the United States Supreme Court is Republican. If a Democratic Supreme Court had made the recent decisions in the civil rights bill cases the country would not soon have heard the last of "hydra head secessions," "State rights fossils," "Confederate treason," &c., &c. Yes, the 3,000 New England clergymen and their descendants, who, in 1850, petitioned Congress in effect to dissolve the Union, would abuse the Court worse than ever they abused the Jesse James gang But as eight of the nine Judges are of the same calibre of thought, the Court will be treated with some respect by them. Occasionally a fanatic will kick the fence down and advertise his unfitness as a clergyman. The Democratic wing of the clergy seem to be passive, as usual, on this political question, and deliver the gospel to their hearers instead of a Radical stump speech.—Sun & Banner.

Chairman Hensel has been sued by B. F. Wilmoth, a detective of Bradford, Pa. During the campaign last year hand-bills were circulated throughout the state offering a reward of $1000 for the arrest and conviction of any person violating the election laws. Mr. Hensel says it is a put up job, and describes the matter in this way.

Wilmoth, who calls himself a detective, got several of his associates to come on from Buffalo. They represented themselves as Republicans to a local tax collector of that party, and induced him to give them antedated tax receipts.

"As soon as Wilmoth got one issued to himself in the name of E. T. Johnson he arrested the tax collector, who was indicted and plead guilty, but has never been punished. Wilmoth claimed the $1000 of me, and I declined to pay it, maintaining that the offense was not covered by the offer of the Democratic State Committee, that the tax collector had never been punished, that I suspected collusion between the parties, that the whole scheme was a game of a money making detective's who did not discover any election frauds, but simply put up a job to beat the committee out of the reward.

"I was warned that if I came to Bradford I would be sued, but I answered that I would not send any one where I feared to go myself. As soon as I crossed the New York line on my way here from Erie via Salamanca today I was met by Wilmoth with the writ."

Riot in Virginia.

FATAL COLOR COLLISION IN THE STREETS OF DANVILLE.

DANVILLE, Va., Nov. 4.—A conflict occurred between a crowd of whites and colored men last evening, in which Walter S. Holland, a son of C. G. Holland was shot in the head and is supposed mortally wounded, and Thos. Seward, shot in the body. Five negroes were killed, and it is supposed many were wounded. The beginning of the conflict was the beating by one of the citizens of a negro, who abused another negro for apologizing for an apparent rudeness and spoke roughly about the citizen. Some of both colors interfered, and a pistol was knocked out of the hands of one of the white men and exploded. Just then a report reached an assembly of white citizens, who were in session about political matters, that a conflict was going on in the street, and they came out in a body. As both classes formed in separate crowds, some of each crowd being armed, a number of negroes approaching the white crowd called out:

"Shoot, we had as soon settle this thing now as any other time." Just then somebody in the white crowd called "fire," and the firing began. The negroes returned the fire and ran off, some firing as they ran. The stores were closed immediately, the alarm bell was sounded, and people came out with arms. The town sergeant came out soon after with one of the military companies and commanded the people in the name of the commonwealth to go home, and the streets were soon cleared. The city is now under the supervision of one of the military companies and the mounted police and the town sergeant, in response to a message from the governor, offering assistance if needed, has telegraphed that all is quiet and no further trouble is apprehended. No arrests have been made as yet. Poltical excitement has been growing more and more intense during the present canvass for members of the legislature.

Hard Money.

DIRECTOR BURCHARD'S VIEWS ON THE STANDARD AND TRADE DOLLAR.

H. M. Burchard, the Director of the Mint, has submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury his annual report, showing the operations of the Mints and Assay Offices during the last fiscal year. The coinage of the year consisted of 98,666,624 pieces, of the value of $66,200,705. The number of pieces struck was greater by about 11,500,000 than in any other fiscal year since the organization of the Mint Bureau.

Under the provisions of the act of 1878 requiring the coinage $2,000,000 worth of silver bullion per month, $154,370,899 have been coined prior to October 1, 1883, and that amount, together with the $31,000,000 of fractional silver in the country, making a grand total of $235,000,000, is, in the judgment of Director Burchard, in excess of the requirements for silver circulation. This, he remarks, is apparent from the fact that there are in the vaults of the Treasury 39,000,000 standard silver dollars over and above the outstanding silver certificates and in addition to nearly $27,000,000 in fractional silver coin, a total of $66,000,000. The Director adds:

My views in regard to the policy of further continuing the coinage of silver dollars were expressed in my report two years ago and remain unchanged. While believing that the equal coinage of both metals is desirable in order to give greater stability to the values of commodities and credits, yet, in view of our inability to continue the increase of our silver circulation at the present rate without ultimately expelling a large portion of the present stock of gold, as well of the waning hope for the co operation of leading commercial nations in securing the general use of silver and its unlimited coinage as money and of the present abundant paper and increasing gold circulation in this country, the question again presents itself for the consideration of legislators whether the law directing the monthly coinage of not less than $2,000,000 worth of silver bullion into standard dollars should not be modified or repealed. At the beginning of the fiscal year the Mints had on hand 35,895,672 standard dollars; the coinage amounted to $28,111,119 and at the close of the year there were remaining in the Mints $43,304,590. The repeal of the act authorizing the coinage of the trade dollar is also recommended. A considerable number had probably gone into circulation prior to its demonetization in 1876 and probably from five millions to seven millions are now held in the country, mostly in the mining and manufacturing regions of Pennsylvania and in the vicinity of New York. While the United States has incurred no legal liability, nevertheless by the act of the government these coins were at first put into circulation and given compulsory currency, and many remain in the hands of those who can ill afford to suffer from the depreciation. He says it would therefore seem to be only an act of justice to them to permit these coins to be sent to the mints and exchanged for other silver coins into which they could be profitably recoined. The Director believes that no cause exists for the apprehension that a large number of exported trade dollars would be returned to this country, for those sent to China have (on account of their greater value as sycee silver than as coin) been melted or disappeared in the interior of that country.

The present report contains as usual the results of the Director's investigations during the year into the production of gold and silver, and its consumption in the arts and manufactures, as well as for the purpose of coinage. The production of gold for the current calender year will probably be $500,000 less than in 1882, and that of silver at least $2,000,000 greater, which will make the production $32,000,000 gold and nearly $49,000,000 silver. Director Burchard estimates that the total coin circulation of the United States on July 1, 1883, was $765,000,000, of which $537,000,000 was gold and $228,000,000 silver.

"I wish to express my appreciation of the valuable qualities of

as a cough remedy.

"While with Churchill's army, just before the battle of Vicksburg, I contracted a severe cold, which terminated in a dangerous cough. I found no relief till on our march we came to a country store, where, on asking for some remedy, I was urged to try AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

"I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since then I have kept the PECTORAL constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be an invaluable remedy for throat and lung diseases. J. W. WHITLEY."

Thousands of testimonials certify to the prompt cure of all bronchial and lung affections, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily.

COURT PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, the Hon. WILLIAM ELWELL President Judge of the Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace and the Court of Common Pleas and Orphans' Court in the 26th Judicial District, composed of the counties of Columbia and Montour, and the Hons. James Lake and F. L. Shuman, Associate Judges of Columbia county, have issued their precept, bearing date the 29th day of Sept. in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, and to me directed for holding a Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, Court of Common Pleas and Orphans' Court, in Bloomsburg, in the county of Columbia, on the first Monday, being the 3rd day of Dec. next, to continue for two weeks.

Notice is hereby given to the Coroner, to the Justices of the Peace, and the Constables of the said County of Columbia, that they be then and there in their proper person at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said 3rd day of Dec. with their records inquisitions and other remembrances, to do those things which to their offices appertain to be done. And those that are bound by recognizance to prosecute against the prisoners that are or may be in the jail of the said county of Columbia, to be then and there to prosecute them as shall be just. Jurors are requested to be punctual in their attendance, agreeably to their notices. Dated at Bloomsburg the 2nd day of Nov. in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three and in the one hundred and eighth year of the Independence of the United States of America.

The failure of Peter Baldy, one of the leading business men of Danville, on Monday last, was the theme of conversation in every circle. His liabilities are over $100,000, and he has confessed judgments to the amount of about $70,000.

Mr. Russel Shultz of Benton township, near Cambra, is the proud father of the champion small baby in Columbia county. It weighed just two pounds at its birth, is enjoying excellent health and is now about three weeks old.

Tuesday evening was the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the wedding of Ellis Cox, at his residence. Many invited guests were present. Some handsome presents were given. A bountiful repast was served. The band enlivened the occasion with good music. A very pleasant time was had and the wish of the many friends of Mr. Cox is that they may see many more such anniversaries.

On October 13th Forepaugh's circus and menagerie exhibited in Williamsport, and Miss Hattie Collins, daughter of Mr. Daniel Collins, who was then employed as a domestic with a family in Newberry, left for the purpose of attending the show. Since that date nothing has been seen or heard from her. Her parents are nearly distracted, and will thankfully receive any information of her whereabouts. The following personal description is given: Age 17 years; light hair; short and heavy set, weighing about 180 pounds. Direct any communication to Daniel Collins, Newberry, Lycoming county, Pa.

Danville is again excited over the appearance of the "cloak man." The Sun says he has been seen several times during the last week. He is described as a tall man wearing a large black cloak, with which he screens his face. Whether he is a lunatic, a detective, or a ruffian no one has been able to find out.

We have in our window two ears of corn which were raised by Reuben Hess on his farm near Rupert. One is thirteen and a half inches long and contains 14 rows of corn, and the other is twelve inches long with 18 rows. They are very fine specimens, and we doubt whether many of our farmers can beat them.

The Bloomsburg Lecture Association have relinquished the field this season, but the ladies of the Home Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church will treat us to a lecture in the Opera House on Friday evening Nov. 16th, by Rev. Sheldon Jackson D. D. of New York City. Dr. Jackson is very familiar with Alaska, his subject, having been there several times, and gives an intensely interesting lecture.

In Centralia there were only 110 democrats voted out of 170. In north Conyngham only 42 out of 224. This is a very light vote, and if the same indifference was manifested everywhere, the result of Tuesday's election is not to be wondered at.

On the other hand Fishingcreek comes in with a gain of 11 votes over last year, and Orange with a gain of 6. The lower end did not do its duty this year. If the right to vote is worth having it is worth using.

Horace Walters, son of A. K. Walters of Ashland, died at his father's house last week Wednesday, aged about thirty years. Some years ago he attended the Normal school here, and will be remembered by many of his old schoolmates as a young man of an unusually bright intellect and of fine social qualities. After leaving school he read law with W. A. Marr, Esq., and was admitted to the Bar of Schulkill county, where he has been practicing for several years. His disease was consumption.

Some unfavorable comments were made on Tuesday because it was found that quite a number of names were omitted from the registry list, and most of them republicans. The fact that the democratic committee looked after the matter and had about forty names put on the sixty day list, while the republicans paid no attention to it, explains how this happened. It was no doubt an exhibition of great carelessness on the part of the assessor to miss the names of some of the most prominent business men whose names have been registered for many years; but to charge that it was done intentionally is absurd, as nothing could have been gained by it, if so done.

Obituary.

Maria, wife of B. F. Hartman, died on Wednesday morning, of dropsy, after a long and suffering illness, aged 70 years, 7 mos. and 25 days. She was a daughter of Daniel Pursel, and was one of a family of eleven children, viz: John, Dennis, Jonathan, Robert, Daniel, Hetty, William, Anne, Maria, Isaac and Sylvester, all the rest of whom are living but Daniel and Jonathan. Had Mrs. Hartman lived until next January, the combined ages of the brothers and sisters would have made 700 years. On the 27th of October Mr. and Mrs. Hartman had been married 47 years. Two children were born to them, a son which died in infancy, and a daughter, Mrs. O. T. Wilson, recently deceased.

Mrs. Hartman was an estimable christian lady, having been for many years a member of the P. E. Church. She leaves her husband and a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. The funeral will be held at the house this Friday afternoon at two o'clock.

A Quail and Her Chicks.

Down in the borough of New Columbus a female quail has either hatched out three chicken eggs or stolen three little chicks from the hen who presided at the incubation. At any rate the quail and the chicks fraternize precisely as though they were of the same family, the little ones following the quail obediently and the former fiercely resisting any attempt to interfere with her charges. This singular and interesting circumstance has attracted considerable attention and excited much remark in the neighborhood.—Wilkesbarre Union-Leader.

The Benton Meeting.

A great crowd of people gathered at Benton last Friday to pay their respects to the Governor on his return from his hunting excursion, a report of which is printed elsewhere. The affair was purely informal and so far as the Governor was concerned, non-partisan. Throngs of people came from lower Luzerne and the townships adjoining Benton and large delegations from other points. The Governor was introduced to the great crowd by Robert Buckingham, and was received with tumultuous applause. His remarks related to his deer-hunt through that section and the grandeur of the scenery he had observed with a number of friends, who accompanied him on his hunt.

The Governor returned to Berwick on Friday afternoon and thence to Harrisburg Saturday morning. After he had left the crowd called for Buckingham, who responded in a speech, discussing the issues involved in the present campaign and the importance of its bearing upon the next Presidential election. The mention of the name of Chairman Hensel as an organizer was lustily cheered. W. H. Snyder, ex-County Superintendent, was then called on for a speech and addressed the audience upon the importance of getting out every Democratic vote. The Benton Band furnished the music for the occasion.

In Memoriam.

Last week we announced in our personal column that Mrs. Martha C. Rishton was convalescing and expected soon to be able to leave her room. For many long weeks she had lain prostrate on a bed of sickness and her end seemed near. She then gave up all hope of recovery and with calm resignation and Christian fortitude prepared to meet the Great Destroyer. But, after balancing on the brink of death for days, she slowly rallied and the hope that she might be spared yet a little longer was revived in the hearts of herself and her friends. Gradually she grew better until she was able to sit up. On Friday she was up most of the day and received a number of callers. On Saturday morning those who passed along Market street were shocked to observe the signal of death pendant from her door knob. The sad tale was soon told. On Friday night at about ten o'clock a sudden change came over her. After complaining of a severe pain in her head she became unconscious, and at three o'clock next morning her spirit returned to the God who gave it.

Mrs. Rishton was a daughter of William Sloan deceased, the relict of the late Thomas Rishton, and sister of M. C. Sloan, Charles P. and Miss Sade Sloan. She leaves one son, Willie.

In the Episcopal church, of which she had been a member for many years, she was an active worker. She sang in the choir for a long time, and was a faithful teacher in the Sunday school. The funeral took place at the church on Sunday afternoon at two o'clock, and the very large throng of friends who gathered to pay their last respects to the deceased testified to the esteem in which she was held in this community.

Centralia Letter.

[This letter was intended for last week's issue, but came too late.—ED.]

On Monday we received another batch of Hungarians, numbering some twenty men and three women. They were gotten here to work for Mr. Church at Montana.

Mr. Edward Breslinc of Mt. Carmel and Miss Kate Langon of Centralia, were married in St. Ignatius' church at mass on Tuesday morning, the Rev. A. J. Breslline, brother of the groom, officiating. The bridesmaids were Miss Horan and Miss Gallagher, Mr. Brennan and O'Toole were groomsmen. The church was filled with invited friends. After the ceremony the happy couple took the noon train for Philadelphia and other points of interest. We wish them a long and happy life in their new undertaking.

On Monday evening Mr. Farrel and Miss Gallagher were united in marriage by Rev. E. T. Field. The couple repaired to the home of the bride where their many friends had a very pleasant evening.

A cave-in occurred at the Logan colliery the fore part of the week, which completely blocked one of the gangways. A large force of men are at work clearing up the debris.

The employees of the Diamond Drill Company are sinking a shaft north of the Logan colliery where they contemplate boring another hole for Messrs. Riley & Co. The last one, it appears, not proving satisfactory.

Howard Stockett, foreman of the Diamond Drill, has resigned his position to accept one on the P & R engineer corps in Pottsville. No appointment has been made as yet to fill the vacancy.

John Langon, a starter at the Centralia colliery, had his hand severely hurt on Wednesday.

Proposals are being received for the driving of two tunnels at Continental colliery. One for the Primrose vein and one for the Skidmore. The company have started to sink a new slope on the Mammoth vein.

W. J. Sweeney gave a turkey supper to his numerous friends on Wednesday evening. It was a most enjoyable affair. They drank Will's health in the "wee sma hours" on Thursday morning and all departed for home wishing to spend their next Hallow Ee'en in a like manner with their genial friends. Quite a number from Mt. Carmel and Mauch Chunk were in attendance.

Our young friend, John Lynch, has gone to boarding school; we wish him succes.

A shooting match for $50 a side took place on Saturday afternoon between Daniel Curry and John Pitts. Both men shot nine birds out of twelve, and having no more birds on hand, the referee decided a draw. Another match will be tried shortly for a much larger sum.

A donation party was held on Wednesday evening for the benefit of Mrs. Smith, who buried her husband and three children in a little over a year. It was a success, financially and otherwise.

A party of young men styling themselves "Lynx" go around scaring people at night. Their latest victim was a farmer from Roaring Creek who had imbibed too freely and wanted to fight. They hung him to a hook in front of a butcher shop by a rope around his body and left him there for about three hours, when some one passing let him loose. The fellow will hardly undertake to get drunk in Centralia again.

The new school building is nearing completion and is quite an improvement to that part of town.

Mr. Heffner, the newly appointed superintendent, has not taken charge of the schools as yet.

A full line of pocket books and purses for ladies or gentlemen just opened at the COLUMBIAN store.

Orangeville Items.

Quite a number of our citizens went to Benton last Friday to see Gov. Pattison and hear him talk. But owing to some misunderstanding among our people as to the time the Governor would address the citizens of Benton they failed to be in time, but fortunately had the good pleasure of seeing him at Stillwater. It was quite a disappointment to many of our town people that the Governor did not give our little village a call.

Prof. Heck has returned home again, and is as usual at his post looking after the interests of his school. Rest and an abundance of good victuals that the Prof. received while visiting has had its desired effect. He looks as fat as a guinea-pig.

The steam saw mill located near the Iron Bridge just above town has been running its best since started, and with about thirty more days of the same kind of work its contract will be finished.

The mud on our streets is drying up making the roads more passable. We also noticed the supervisor on Monday last at work trying to place them in better condition for the winter travel.

Is it lawful to dump saw dust into streams that the Fish Commissioners have stocked with bass and trout. I hear a great deal of complaint concerning the mill at the bridge running all their dust into the creek. If it destroys the fish then there should be a stop put to the business. There was a great many bass to be seen near the bridge this summer, but very few now. I suppose the dust has cleaned them out.

Business in Orangevile is still on the increase. I have been an observer and could not help but notice that the leading and enterprising merchants Lilley and Sleppy are doing a rushing business. Their stock is complete, and with their pluck they are sure to control a large trade.

Somebody was drunk or very sick Saturday night as Sunday morning revealed the contents of some very weak stomachs on the sidewalks. Boys, if whisky won't settle your stomachs then try water for a change.

W. A. Robbins and wife and A. W. Eveland and wife visited friends last week at Watsontown.

Miss Susie Hayman has returned home from Renovo, Clinton Co., this state.

Our townsman Geo. Herring is very pleasant since that he has become the father of a ten pound boy.

Mike is looking for the lad that treed out Perry Keller's coat giving it the locust cut on the back. Such conduct should be rewarded with a good fine for damage, as such an act is surely malicious mischief.

The trot between Bloomsburg and Orangeville was quite a lively affair on Friday last. The roads were bad but nevertheless the race was a success. By all appearances the Orangeville teams were a little too fast for the Bloomsburg turnouts. Time, 8 40.

Wm. Bower, wife and daughter have just returned from Kansas where they have resided for the past five years. Mr. Bower intends making his home in Columbia Co. in the future.

I have heard that a new society is to be organized soon in this town. It is to be called "The Young Men's Baldheaded Society." I think the idea a good one as there is plenty of material here to start one. Unfortunately X. Y. Z. cannot become a member.

I have been informed that Henry Everett is mending very slowly, and by all accounts it will be a long while before he will be about.

The fine weather is making the farmers feel glad. Their winter grain is looking very nice, and with the fine stand it is getting the probabilities are it will winter well.

The railroad excitement has abated, but we think that after the election has quieted down it will revive again. It would certainly be a relief to us if Cap. would let us know when the first lot of hands will arrive. The squad he sent to Stillwater some time ago has failed to go to work. I presume the Bear and other animals went on a strike. Cap, send the monkey and the hat around as the anti-railroad men want to give lavishly.

J. W. Lilley intends going to the North Mountain for deer next week. Jim never fails in bringing venison home with him.

X. Y. Z. remains unknown yet to the people of Orangeville. Niblo thinks he knows him but so far the poor boy is on the wrong track.

The Governor's Visit.

The past week has been one of excitement to everybody, as it became generally known that a real, live Governor had passed through on his way to the North Mountain for a few days' rest from the cares of office. His excellency, Gov. Pattison, and party, consisting of Mr. H. C. Dern of Altoona and Dr. H. Pitcairn of Harrisburg, (proprietors of the Altoona Tribune), Mr. Frysinger of York, and Rev. W. W. Evans of Berwick, arrived Monday noon at the residence of Daniel McHenry Esq., where they halted long enough to partake of an excellent dinner prepared for the occasion, after which they were accompanied by Daniel McHenry & Son and Rev. D. M. Kinter of Stillwater, to the pleasant and beautiful mountain resort kept by "Billy" Cole, where all arrived about dark with only the slight incident of a break-down of the principal vehicle when near their destination. Muddy roads and the weariness of travel were soon forgotten in the pleasurable excitement of Mother Cole's buckwheat cakes and maple molasses. After supper there was a general unpacking of Ordnance and Ordnance stores such as is seldom seen outside of the State Arsenal (no insinuations intended) and when all was satisfactorily arranged, and plans for to-morrow's hunt discussed, all retired to dream of the coming sport, which they evidently did amid a variety of queer noises resembling somewhat the snortings of a scared buck.

Tuesday morning dawned fair and pleasant. Breakfast at 7, after which a party of thirteen, led by Billy Cole, started "Injin" file, to wend its way up the steep and tortuous path leading to the mountain's summit. My pen is inadequate to describe that march, so we leave it to the imagination of the reader. At about 9 o'clock, a. m., the hunt began and continued all day amid the crashing of falling trees and limbs, the wind having risen to a heavy gale, endangering somewhat both life and limb of the jolly hunters. Like all things earthy, that hunt ended, the result of which was: bucks killed, 0; does, 0; porcupines, 1; pheasants, 1 wounded. The descent to Mr. Cole's was finally accomplished after considerable of lofty tumbling and divers measures of lengths on the side of the mountain, from the tall form of his Excellency down to the lithe figure of the senior proprietor of the Altoona Tribune. Here they found one of Mother Cole's excellent suppers awaiting their coming, which was soon hid away by as hungry a set as you often see. Thus refreshed, the spirits of each arose to its wonted height as in turn they recited the incidents of the day, and what they would have done had Mr. Buck put in an appearance, after which all gladly sought repose in the land of forgetfulness. Wednesday's hunt was more exciting, as two deer were sighted—one of which, a large buck, was fired at twice, and, sorry to say, missed. After a severe day's tramp the discomfited nimrods returned to the attack of a famous turkey which graced the head of the table which literally groaned under the weight of good things which were speedily conveyed to the stomachs of the hungry hunters, after which there was more groaning!! Wednesday evening the company was augmented by the arrival of Mr. J. J. McHenry of Benton, and Dr. Gardner of Bloomsburg. Another pleasant evening spent in relating incidents, jokes, &c.

Thursday morning opened with the first snow of the season, and as several new hunters arrived, quite a little army, including the Commander-in-Chief of the Pennsylvania Militia, started for the last effort at capturing one or more of the beautiful denizens of the forest. The hunting was very disagreeable, owing to the snow on the bushes, and one division (they had divided into two parts) soon tired and returned, minus the deer, about 1 o'clock, p. m. The other division, having gone farther, were more persevering and continued the hunt until late in the afternoon when they returned bearing aloft one of the grand denizens of the North Mountain as an evidence of his Excellency's skill as a hunter, showing that a buck as well as a "Beaver" must succumb to his ability to make a long and successful run. Joy was seen depicted on every countenance and all were well pleased with the wind-up of the great hunt.

On Friday morning his Excellency and party started on the return trip, stopping at Benton where a large and enthusiastic crowd of the friends and admirers of the Governor had assembled to greet and welcome him to our beautiful valley. The Governor addressed them in his usually graceful and happy manner and by his pleasant and affable deportment won the hearts of the multitude. An excellent dinner was prepared for the party at the Exchange Hotel, where the inner man was refreshed, and in the evening the Governor and party started for Berwick where they took the cars on Saturday morning for the State Capital, greatly delighted with their trip, promising at some future time to renew it.

I am happy to say that the Governor is a Christian gentleman, and a peoples' man—just such a man as every good man delights to honor. His Christian dignity is an honor to this great Commonwealth, and contrasts strangely with that arrogance and self-esteem so generally seen in those called to fill high places. His party should feel proud of him and stand by him to a man, in his manly effort to rise above mere party interests and serve all the people of the State for their good. We are glad to have met him, and he will find a hearty welcome whenever he elects to come again. The party consisted entirely of men who are not ashamed to acknowledge God as their Father and Jesus Christ as their rightful Sovereign. Thank God, Christianity is coming to the front. So might it be. NIM.

WANT OF FAITH.

If C. A. Kleim, the Druggist, does not succeed it is not for the want of faith. He has such faith in Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung syrup as a remedy for Coughs, Colds, Consumption, and all affections, that he gives a bottle free to each and every one who is in need of a medicine of this kind.

WILL WONDERS EVER CEASE?

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 9, 1883.
Mr. Phelps, Dear Sir—I consider it my duty to tell you how much good your Rheumatic Elixir has done me. For ten years I had Rheumatism in my left arm and last fall it extended through my whole body and limbs. I could hardly turn in bed, and several days I could neither feed myself nor walk without sticks. I took everything that I could hear of, but got no better, and I began to get discouraged. Mr. Good, the druggist, advised me to take Phelps' Rheumatic Elixir. I did so, and after having taken the first bottle I felt satisfied that it was helping me. When I had taken three bottles I was entirely cured. I feel very grateful for what your medicine has done for me. I will cheerfully recommend it to those afflicted with Rheumatism. You can use my name as you wish in behalf of your Elixir.
Yours, with many thanks,

Rheumatic Syrup Co:
Wolcott, N. Y., June 18, '82.
Gents—A few weeks since, while suffering with bilious colic, which rendered me unfit for business, I was advised to try a bottle of your syrup. I had no faith in it at all, at that time, for the reason that I had tried so many things in years past without receiving any relief, but before the first bottle was emptied I was feeling better than I had felt for many years. I know now, that I have tried it, that it is the greatest remedy that exists in the world, and I feel proud to recommend the Rheumatic Syrup to all sufferers from bilious colic, for I am satisfied it has cured me. Wishing you every success with your most wonderful syrup. I am, sincerely yours,

Spending the People's Money.

EXPERIMENTS GREATLY MIXED—THE FARM A LAUGHING STOCK TO ALL FARMERS—AGRICULTURAL TESTS THAT FAILED.

So many strange and incomprehensible experiments have been made on the state experimental farm near West Grove, Chester county, that the once beautiful place has degenerated into a neglected wilderness with tumbledown buildings, rickety fences, wretched looking live stock and weeds everywhere. This condition of affairs excites all the more comment on account of the success of a private agricultural experiment, the Rose nursery, which was started in a small way in the neighborhood about the time the state bought and stocked the farm. The nursery has increased in size and importance every year, until now it is the largest place of its kind in America. Its business in season amounts to $3,500 a week in roses alone, and over 100 gardeners are employed in the 70 greenhouses.

The experimental farm contains 100 acres of good land and although it was well managed for several years the place was never self supporting and an annual appropriation of $1,000 was received from the state. Many belligerent farmers in the county say that some of the experiments made by the earlier managers of the farm were of great benefit, particularly those made with phosphates. So interested were the agriculturalists of the country in the experiments that they visited the farm frequently, and the reports of the results of tests were published in local newspapers and attracted a great deal of attention.

A few days ago a dozen members of the Concordville farmers' club visited the farm and were told that they were the first visitors that had been there for several months. They found the place in such a deplorable condition that they sent a report to the state agricultural society. William Edwards is the scientist in charge of the place, and he is assisted in his researches by a Lancaster county gentleman, Henry Flohr. Before they took charge of the place they were not noted as particularly intelligent farmers, and Mr. Flohr admitted to a Times reporter that "speriments is all well enough, but this here farm would do a great deal better if the 'speriments was dropped and the ground put into tobaccer." The farm house, a large, modern building of concrete, tops a small hill a few hundred yards from a public road. Fronting the house is a fine arboretum, which is divided by a lane from the main road to the barn. The arboretum contains hundreds of fine specimens of imported and native trees and shrubs, but they have had no care for years. Cattle have chewed their shoots and robbed the trunks and hogs have torn up the sward, until it looks as though half a dozen sub-soil plows had been ripping up the earth. The brick barn is large and well built, but it is in wretched order. Its front roof leaks like a sieve and the stable yard is a filthy lagoon, the waste of which runs off into a brook and is carried away to enrich the ground of practical farmers in the valley. Two of the mows in the barn are filled with sheaf oats and the others contain unthreshed wheat. The oats are damaged by every rain, as the water trickles through the roof in a hundred places. Behind the barn stands an old stack of straw and a stack of weeds that were cut and hauled there to rot and be mixed with the manure.

The barnyard is surrounded by a stone fence, the rocking of which has tumbled off in many spots and has never been, replaced. Four wretched looking common cows stood knee-deep in the barnyard muck picking a breakfast out of the old straw pile. Three ragged sheep, two bucks and a ewe, were in the field adjoining the barnyard and an undersized jackass brayed in a neighboring pen. In the stalls of the stable were two horses and a pair of dejected looking mules, with tails like old dusting brushes. The stable is very filthy. At the upper end of the barn are half a dozen pig pens of the Queen Anne style of architecture. The style of architecture is still apparent, but the structures are so dilapidated that if not repaired they will soon tumble down. In the pens were five hungry, wild eyed swine which, when Mr. Flohr approached them, made frantic efforts to scale the fence and devour him. Mr. Flohr, as he beat back the hogs, smilingly exclaimed: "They looks like we had been 'sperimentin' with 'em and seein' how little they could live on, but it ain't so. They have lots to eat, but they're so stubborn that they won't git fat." The four cows, three sheep, two horses, two mules, one jackass and five hogs constitute the live stock outfit of the farm and several animals named belong to Mr. Edwards. Two or three years ago the farm had a herd of fine graded and Jersey cattle, half a dozen horses, a big drove of well fed hogs and a flock of sheep of the best blood. They have been disposed of, but no one appears to know who got the proceeds. The farm had also enough first class implements to stock half a dozen common farms. It is all gone. A year or so ago the farm had forty-three new plows, which different manufacturers had sent there for trial. Many of them were never even tested. They were all sold to raise money to pay the wages of laborers and other bills. The machinery was disposed of in the same way.

To the right of the pig pens are the big Fairbank scales, on which everything raised on the place is supposed to be weighed at one time or another.

Facing the scales and on the upper side of a roadway is a carpenter shop and tool house. The building is in bad repair and its contents are a lot of odds and ends of little or no value, which have been flung in out of the way. Midway between the carpenter shop and the farm house and on a line with both is a pretty little one story Gothic building, surrounded by an iron verandah. This was intended for and was once used as the office of the manager of the farm. It is now a storehouse for potatoes. A short distance behind the office is the hot house, in which the early managers of the farm raised five and eight pound bunches of grapes. No grapes were raised this year and many of the vines are dead. In explanation of this Mr. Flohr said: "The big grapes all bursted open and dried up like raisins when we turned the heat on to ripen 'em." Near the farm buildings are ten acres of peaches and grape vines and five acres of apples. Grapes and pears were not so plentiful. None of the trees have been properly cared for and the grape vines have been allowed to run wild. Car loads of Bartlette and other fine pears ripened, fell to the ground and were alowed to rot without being marketed. The ground under the trees being literally covered with decayed fruit. A few wagon loads of pears were sold in the neighborhood, but no effort was made to find a better market for them. Five wagon loads gathered and mixed up with two loads of apples, were ground up into five barrels or cider. The grapes were sold in the neighborhood at two and three cents per pound. Twenty tons of hay were gathered during the season and good corn was raised on twenty-five acres of ground. The experiments this year consisted of the sowing of wheat on a quarter of an acre of ground divided into ten beds, different wheat and different fertilizers being used on each.

In half dozen similar beds corn was planted with different phosphates. The grain was cut, threshed, weighed and dumped into the granary. Mr. Flohr says he don't think these "speriments" will amount to much, as he and Mr. Edwards had forgotten the kind of fertilizers used on each bed. "Got 'em mixed up," as he expresses it.—*Phila. Manuring Orchards.

The New England Farmer strongly urges the manuring of orchards before winter sets in. The following article from that paper is worthy of special attention:

"This has been a barren year for the most of the orchards in the country, but the trees have made fruit buds for next year's bearing, which will bring abundant crops next year should the season prove favorable. Now an over-abundant crop is often of little more value than a moderate crop in a year of less general abundance. Farmers who treated their orchards properly have apples to use and to sell this year when they bring good prices, but they began the treatment at least a year in advance. A great many apple trees that stand in grass are looking anything but flourishing with close, matted top and dead or mossy branches. If the land under such tress could be ploughed and the tops judiciously thinned out, and plearty of manure spread over the ground, the trees would take a new start, and possibly bear a fair crop next year. If all this should be done, most persons would give nearly all the credit to the ploughing, because it is usually noticeable that trees which are ploughed around look much healthier and produce far better crops of fruit than trees standing in grass. It must be remembered, however, that ploughed ground usually receives all the manure, while the grass land gives up its annual crop without the application of any manure whatever. Now, if we would apply manure as liberally to the trees that stand in the grass as to those under which we try to grow cultivated crops, we should find that we could get equally fine fruit and in great abundance.

"The time to prepare for a crop of apples next year, that will be worth picking and carrying to market, is now, before the ground freezes. Spread a heavy dressing of good stable manure under such trees as are worth saving, and dig up the poor ones and cut them into firewood for burning these cold winter evenings, which are soon coming. After spreading, draw a heavy bush or drag over the ground to crush the lumps and spread the manure more over the entire area, and to press it close down to the surface where the rains and melting snows will carry it down into the soil where the roots will find it. Apple roots in grass run quite near the surface and will be reached by manure quicker than if all the roots are destroyed by ploughing to the depth of six or eight inches.

"We are not at this time arguing against ploughing apple orchards, but to ask those of our readers who are not prepared to plough under their trees, to give the top dressing a trial, even if it be only upon a few trees In our own experience we have been surprised to notice how quickly a tree will respond to manure spread upon the surface, even when that surface is in grass. The trimming out of the over-dense tops is work that may be commenced at any time, and continue through the winter, as leisure is found. In thinning out it will better to take out many small limbs by several cuts than to remove large ones by cutting once only. Large wounds do not heal as readily, and taking out large limbs leaves the tree less well balanced. The aim should be to diminish the number of fruit buds by thinning out the small twigs and thus thinning the fruit after it is formed It would have been better to have begun this work a year earlier, but something can be done even now to ensure a crop that will be salable next year, whether the general crop is large or small.

How Diamonds are Cut.

"There are three processes necessary to be gone through with between the rough stone and the diamond as you see it here," said a Cleveland jeweler to a reporter. First a piece of stone the required size must be cut off. To do this we use a circular saw made of sheet iron and without teeth. It worked like a woodworker's saw, and two men stand at the treadle. One man holds the stone to be cut tightly against the edge of the saw, while the other, using a small leather dipped in oil, applies diamond dust to the edge of the saw. The saw is made of very ductile metal, and the particles of diamond dust, becoming firmly set in, soon wear through the hardest stone. Now the piece of diamond passes to the cutting table, upon which is strapped a wheel running parallel to the top of the table. The stone is fastened by cement to the end of a stick six inches long. The lapidary takes his stick in his right hand and holds the stone firmly against the wheel until one face is ground down. Diamond dust and water are constantly applied to the wheel. The table and upper facets of the stone are cut this way, and the stone is then removed from and readjusted to the stick before the lapidary cuts the under sides, callets and remaining facets. The stone is manipulated the same in the third or polishing process as in the cutting process. The wheel, however, is composed mainly of tin, and tripoli and rotten stone are used in the polishing process."

FLOUR SOUP.—Put some dry flour in a frying pan, and shake it lightly over a clear, not too hot, fire, until it becomes a golden brown. While still hot, pour over it a sufficient quantity of milk to form the soup. It will of course, entirely depend on the number of persons to partake of it. Add plenty of white sugar and powdered cinnamon. Cook the mixture very carefully, turning it round gently, always in one direction, with a silver spoon, like a custard. At the moment of serving, this soup must be thickened with the yolks of eggs; fried croutons, fingers of bread toasted brown, or crushed ordinary captain's biscuit, are eaten with it. Instead of browned flour, plain rice flour can be used: which need not be treated.

A Chicago man walked into the depot where his wife was awaiting a train to elope with a young lover. After a few words he persuaded her to return home; and everybody believes, of course, that he promised her a new bonnet and a sealskin sacque.

Printing a Newspaper Without Type.

A new type-setting machine is invented. If the claims for it are true, the day of the printer is drawing to a close. It will further help the cheapening of the price of newspapers. The machine has the capacity of setting 40,000 ems a day. It works with ironclad accuracy, and avoids the fault of the present type setting machines in that it can "justify" the lines as a compositor can now with the hand method. No type is necessary with this machine beyond a few alphabets of the various kinds and sizes required in the make up of a newspaper. There is a key board to the machine like that of a piano. These keys represent letters and punctuation marks. Playing on them impresses these forms into a paper matrix similar to that now employed in moulding the metal forms employed upon the Bullock press. Instead of setting up type by the old method and taking a matrix from the locked form as a whole the impression is made direct from the machine, one letter at a time, so that when the type setting machine is through the matrix is instantly ready for the moulding of the cylindrical forms employed upon the modern press. The value of this one feature in the mere saving of time is great, because the gain of one minute in the stereotyping of the forms of a great office is experimented with in the office of the Philadelphia Times. The inventor says the machines can be furnished at a cost of $700 each.

His Last Chance.

[New York Journal.]

As Mr. Popperman threw himself on the sofa last Monday evening, and took up the evening paper, his wife said to him; "Charles, I went to a wedding to-day."

"Did you, indeed?" said he. "Whom did you marry?"

"What an idea! I saw a couple married in church."

"Oh."

"Yes. They were married according to the latest fashion."

"The latest fashion? What is that? For the bride and groom to give presents to all the guests? What did you get?"

"No, no. I mean the latest fashion in regard to entering the church. Formerly you know the bride and groom both came down the same aisle. Now, when they leave the carriage at the entrance of the church, the bride comes down the aisle followed by her maids, but the groom goes around the corner, comes in at the side door, and meets the bride at the altar."

"What's that? Do you say that the groom goes around the corner and comes in at the side door?"

"Yes, dear."

That's a slendid idea."

"Why?"

"Cause it gives him a good chance to get away."

The Old Generals.

THOSE THAT HAVE DIED SINCE THE WAR—WHERE THE LIVING ONES RESIDE.

Of the old war generals, Meade, Thomas, Hooker, Garfield, Kilpatrick, Burnside and Hall are on fame's eternal camping ground. Grant is getting old but has good health, pleanty of money and enjoys life. Sherman is sixty-four, but looks older. Sheridan who was a major-general at thirty, is to command the army at fifty-one. Fitz John Porter is white haired and broken in frame. McClellan is rich, rotund and round shouldered, with the activity of his life over. Pleasanton, the cavalry hero, lives quietly at Washington. Rosecrans, the Californian congressman, lives at Washington, and his hair, with a military cut, is snow white. Hawley and Logan, well preserved gentlemen of fifty-seven, and Slocum, are also in congress. Sickles is a New York lawyer. Stoneman is governor of California. Doubleday is in New York writing a book, Humphreys, Hunter and Crittenden, on the retired list, live in Washington Fremont, no longer rich, lives in New York. McDowell is on the retired list. Buell is in business in Kentucky. Banks is United States marshal. Hancock, Scofield and Pope are major generals in the army, and Howard a brigadier. Terry is expected to succeed Sheridan in chief command of the army. Gilmore Parke and Weitzel are in charge of lighthouses and fortifications. Grierson is commanding a colored regiment in Texas.

ODD ITEMS.

Boiled potatoes are spoken of as Gebhards in fashionable circles because they are so easily mashed.

It is now stated that glucose is used in adulterating milk. It is no longer safe to raise babies on the bottle.

Bonnets are now worn far back on the head again, as some years ago. By the time cold weather comes they will be on the nape of the neck.

One of those deep writers who paralyze the world with their great thoughts observes that a woman is the salt of man's life. Yes, we have frequenly observed that she puts him in a pickle.

It is going to be fashionable this winter to rub the nose during real cold weather. The proper style will be to use the left hand, on one of the fingers of which must be a diamond ring. Those who wish to keep up with the styles ought to thoroughly post themselves.

Mrs. Langtry still wears banged hair and a bulging pocket book The latter is an idea she picked up in America.

The ridicule of the press has caused tight pants to almost disappear; but when it comes to tight men the power of the press appears to lose its grip.

When Vanderbilt fell out of his carrige he didn't drop his pocket-book, and yet there is an old adage reading, "When rogues fall out honest men get their dues."

Quite a number of cases where girls have been deceived by mock marriages have been reported recently. No girl has any business to marry a man that she hasn't known for at least ten minutes.

While a Wisconsin girl was at the altar about to be married a little bird flew into the window and perched on her shoulder. Some of her friends regarded it as a happy omen, while others are willing to swear that as it was a bird it signifies that she was making a goose of herself.

Incited by Buffalo Bill's exhibition's, Willie Cramp of Reading, Pa., practiced with the lasso. The lasso caught an empty car of a passing coal train, and as the rope was wound around his body he was dragged until, fortunately, the rope caught at a switch and was broken.

"Yes, my wife is a good poker player," says a Long Island farmer, and then he adds: "She is also just as handy with the tongs."

A Boston chess player sat patiently behind a balky horse, and then calmy observed to the animal: "It's your next move."

Girls, when an eligible youth pops the question never say, "I should blush to twitter." Always observe, "I scream to ejaculate."

A preacher in Tennesse is known as the "satisfying preacher." Whenever a church began to get a little tired of their pastor, this man was sent for, and after hearing a sermon or two from him they were "satisfied"—to keep the pastor they had.

Before one of the Justices of the Peace the lawyer for a defendant in an assault and battery case desired to prove that the plaintiff was a woman of temper. He therefore asked:

"Didn't you throw a kettle at one of the water-works' men last spring?"

"Yes and what of it!" she snapped. "Didn't the neighbor on one side strike at him with an axe, and the one on the the other snap a shot gun at him six or seven times before it went off and tore five pickets off the fence!"

In the Pilot House.

"Yes, sir; this kind of work obliges a man to keep sober as a judge. Of all men in the world, steamboat pilots and railroad engineers should let liquor alone. For on their clearness of sight and coolness of head depends the safety of life and property."

Keeping his hand on the wheel as he said this, Mr. A. Brockman, of No. 29½ Silver street, Chicago, added: "Of course, some of 'em drink; but the sober ones have the best positions and the best pay. Yes, the work and exposure sometimes tells on us; but for my part, I find PARKER'S TONIC to be all the invigorant I need. I've got a bottle aboard here now; never go on a trip without it. When I haven't any appetite, or am in any way out of sorts, it sets me up in no time. If drinking men would use the Tonic, it would help 'em, to break off. (No, that isn't a light-house; it's a star, low down near the water.) As I was saying, the Tonic is new life bottled up. You see that flag-staff? Well, with a bottle of PARKER'S TONIC in the locker I can keep malaria as far from me as that, all the time. My wife has used it for three years for summer complaints and colic, and as an invigorant, when she's tired out from overwork. She says the Tonic is a daisy. Good-bye! Don't break your neck going below."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be advertised and sold simply under the name of PARKER'S TONIC. As unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting inferior articles under the name of ginger, and as ginger is really an unimportant ingredient, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation, itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine If the fac-simile signature of HISCOX & Co. is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.
